1-Point Perspective
Due Tuesday 04/24/18

Hello again my budding artists! Today we learn about Perspective, and in particular, 1-point perspective. First things first, grab a parent or guardian and look up “Perspective in art”. Please write a short definition and be sure to quote your source (where you got the definition from). Please do not use wikipedia. Then, go to:

<https://www.pinterest.com/pin/147281850289827267/> or, https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=5&v=SFNRxfaCKLw and view the video tutorial by Art with Alex.

Follow the instructions but try to create your own landscape. As we discussed in class, you may go with the drawing in the video but preference is with your own creations - remember to finish your drawings with a black marker or very dark black colored pencil. NO PENCIL DRAWINGS PLEASE (a point will be deducted automatically if drawings come back in pencil).

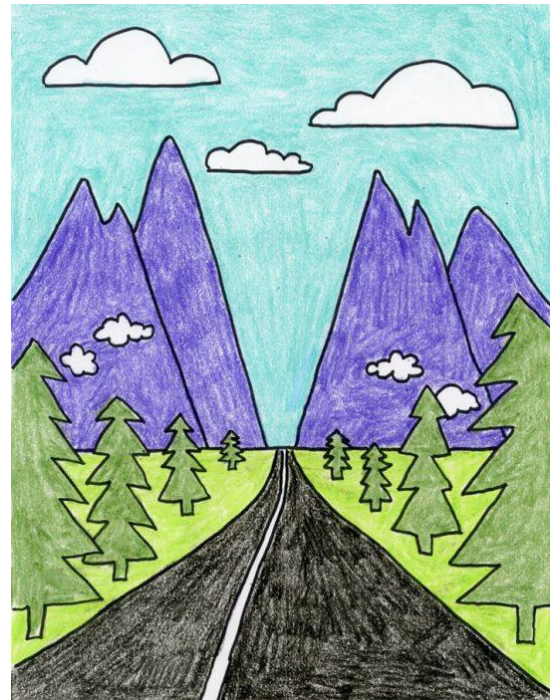

If you prefer to apply this tutorial to a 1-point perspective painting (instead of drawing) feel free. You may use any of the various painting techniques we’ve learned over time. Just be sure to pay attention to what makes the landscape a 1-point perspective landscape.

I’ve included some images on 1-point perspective drawings that I sourced on Pinterest.

It's truly amazing to see the 3-Dimensional drawing coming to life before your eyes! I can't wait to see what you do this week! Don't forget, late submissions will not be accepted without a written note from parent or guardian. Bring your pieces to the art room next Tuesday and be prepared for our next adventure in our "Art Lab"!

Now go forth and create and remember to have fun! :)
